BATES CASE CLOSED. CAUGHT BY A DECOY LETTER. WILSON A

Testimony.

Counsel Will Hand In Briefs Within Ten Days.

Ten Days Afterwards They Will Submit the Case.

Special Term of the Superior Court was all over except for some odds and ends in expert testimony as to the handwriting of Charles F. Bates, yet there was " no diminution of the crowd of people who sought admission to the court chamber this morning.

Contrary to announcement, it was after Il o'clock when the trial was resumed, but 200 men had stood up in the rear of the court-room for an hour without complaining.

Nana was very fetching, indeed, in a glove-fitting tailor-made gown of dark blue, the fifth costume of the series of five trial days.

Expert Carvalho, who boasts a record in chirography, was recalled to the stand after cross-examination, and Expert Daniel T. Ames, who goes Carvalho three years better, and who is invariably pitted against the younger man in court contests, watched and listened during the cross-examination.

Mr. Carvalho testified that in the examination of questioned writings he first looked for internal evidence of simulation.

The original or alleged marriage con-act is "Exhibit No. 4." the copy written by Charlle Bates in court yesterday is "No. 30." Mr. Carvalho was made to admit that Mr. Carvalho was made to admit that general character was not given any hand; that the spacing was one of these characteristics, and that in No. 3) the spacing was much wider than in No. 4.

Handing one of the "wife" letters to the expert, Mr. Peckham asked him it the link used in the word "wife" was not in a different shade of ink to that used in the last five words of the letter.

"It is not," promptly replied Mr. Carvalho. "It does not require an expert trunk and stole the rooms to determine that the same color of ink was used, there being only a different.

"That would be one way to account for it," replied Mr. Carvalho.

"Show me another 'l' in the whole letter grat is detted so high up as that collections one in the word 'wife,' 'demanded Mr. Terry ar reckham.

The expert looked but found none.

of the dots over the "I" in wife to those over the "Is" in several letters was conceded by Mr. Carvalho.

In another letter Mr. Peckham contended that "little flances" was so dissimilar to the rest of the letter as to attract the latter as to attract the latter and to attract the latter of the letter as to attract the latter of the letter and "No. Sir; they are quite characteristic."

Just at the close of the cross-examination Mr. C. Bates entered and studded across the floor in a coaching cost of across the floor in a coaching cost of buff, with its tails hitching upon his heels at every step. There was a silk factor, with a mourning weed, and a new pair of kids to match the outfit so that everybody was prepared to see Charle Bates's long frock cost of black revealed when he removed his fifth overcoat for 'he fifth day of the trial.

On redirect examination, Mr. Carvalho discoursed on the undisputed portions of the letters, and illustrated the eccentricities of the youth in writing, saying. "These things show that Mr. Bates is very erratic in his habits in writing. He has no rule for dotting 'l's' and crowing his 't's'; and in spacing, except that he always leaves a wide space for a capital letter, both before and after it.
